Anchorpoint Enters into Strategic Collaboration with Solana Foundation to Explore Expanding Global Access to HKDAP

First collaboration between Anchorpoint and a public blockchain foundation aims to support planned retail access and other high velocity use cases

Hong Kong, 30 Oct, 2026 – Anchorpoint Financial Limited ("Anchorpoint"), a Hong Kong-licensed stablecoin issuer, today announced a strategic collaboration with Solana Foundation ("Solana"), to expand HKDAP to Solana, supporting retail, payment, tokenised RWA trading and other high-volume use cases while broadening access to Hong Kong Dollar via HKDAP through Solana's global ecosystem.

Through the collaboration, Anchorpoint plans to support the native minting and redemption of HKDAP on the Solana blockchain, with near-instant settlement speed. This is intended to support retail and other high-velocity use cases for HKDAP, leveraging Solana's ecosystem of wallets partners, applications and developers. Solana currently supports approximately US$4.9 billion of tokenised real-world assets and more than 835,000 RWA holders, while recent initiatives such as its Samsung Wallet collaboration demonstrate the potential for digital assets to reach mainstream consumer channels. As HKDAP explore to expand to the Solana network, Anchorpoint and Solana Foundation plan to facilitate seamless access to HKDAP and HKDAP-enabled tokenised products through corporate partners and consumer applications.

Beyond retail applications, Anchorpoint will work together to broaden international adoption of HKDAP through Solana's global ecosystem, as an efficient and regulated instrument to deploy capital into Hong Kong Dollar-driven services, products and investment. This strengthens Hong Kong Dollar's appeal in international markets and supports Hong Kong as a leading treasury and capital markets hub.

Solana Foundation will also join Anchorpoint's Tokenised Money Adoption Programme (TAP) as a strategic partner, following the recent addition of PwC. The participation builds on Solana's growing commitment to Hong Kong following its induction into the OASES programme and planned establishment of a local presence in the city. Through TAP, Solana Foundation will work alongside industry participants to support collaboration, knowledge sharing and the continued development of Hong Kong regulated stablecoin and tokenisation ecosystem.

Lu Yin, Head of APAC, Solana Foundation, said: "Stablecoins play an important role in bringing digital assets into everyday financial activity. With fast settlement and access to a global ecosystem of wallets and applications, HKDAP on Solana has the potential to make Hong Kong Dollar-denominated digital value more accessible and useful across a wider range of real-world use cases. Initiatives like this help bridge regulated financial infrastructure with the speed, accessibility and scale needed for the next generation of digital financial services."

Dominic Maffei, Chief Executive Officer & Co-Founder, of Anchorpoint, said: "We are building towards an open network designed to connect ecosystems, not fragment them. Our collaboration with Solana Foundation reflects that philosophy, bringing together regulated tokenised money infrastructure and one of the world's leading public blockchain ecosystems. As we continue to expand the HKDAP ecosystem, our focus remains on enabling connectivity across networks, participants and markets. By building open infrastructure, we can create greater opportunities for our partners while supporting broader access to regulated Hong Kong dollar digital money."
