Finloop Supports Issuance of the First Tokenised Note Product with Subscription, Redemption and Interest Payments in HKDAP

Hong Kong, 16 October, 2026 — Finloop Finance Technology Holding Limited (“Finloop”), an AI-driven global one-stop wealth technology platform announced its support for the issuance of the first tokenised note product that allows subscription, redemption and interest payout in HKDAP, a regulated HKD stablecoin issued by Anchorpoint Financial Limited (“Anchorpoint”). The tokenised product is offered to professional investors, providing a more efficient way to manage cash and liquidity on-chain, and greater flexibility in digital wealth management.

The transaction was supported through two subsidiaries within Finloop:

- Finloop Finance Limited (“Finloop Finance”), a financial institution licensed by the Hong Kong Securities and Futures Commission (SFC) and an authorised distributor of HKDAP, offering subscription, redemption, exchange, trading and settlement services for HKDAP; and
- Finloop Finance Technology Services Limited (“Finloop Technology”), which served as the tokenisation agent, providing technology service.

Fosun International Asset Management Limited serves as the investment adviser to the product issuer. Leveraging its global asset allocation experience and risk management capabilities, it will provide professional advice on investment strategy and asset allocation.

The tokenised note product expands the range of on-chain use cases for HKDAP, demonstrating how regulated stablecoin can be integrated to support a broader spectrum of investment and wealth management activities.

Cai Hua, CEO of Finloop, said: “Supporting HKDAP subscription for a tokenised note product is a key step in our effort to take RWA (real-world asset) tokenisation and stablecoins into real commercial use. We aim to give eligible investors a more efficient and clearer path—along with an improved cash management experience—across core processes such as subscription, redemption and receiving returns. Leveraging our tokenisation services and wealth technology capabilities, Finloop will continue to drive regulated stablecoins to truly serve the real economy.”

Dominic Maffei, Chief Executive Officer and Co-Founder of Anchorpoint, said: “The intrinsic value of tokenisation is not simply creating digital versions of traditional assets, but enabling those assets to operate within a fully digital financial ecosystem. This transaction showcases how HKDAP can support tokenised note product throughout their lifecycle, from subscription to redemption and payment distribution. We look forward to continuing our collaboration with Finloop to help regulated stablecoins better serve institutional cash and liquidity management needs, and support a wider range of real-world financial applications.”

Looking ahead, Finloop will continue collaborating with ecosystem partners to advance RWA tokenisation and the development of digital capital market infrastructure. It will also explore opportunities for HKDAP and related wealth management products in institutional capital allocation, transaction payments, and collateral applications, helping regulated stablecoins move from pilots into broader institutional adoption, and providing a replicable model for connecting regulated tokenised assets with real economic activity.
